GENERAL INTELLIGENCE.

STEAMBOAT OF THE PENNSYLVANIA.

AUSTIN, (GA.) Nov. 1.

The following account of this dreadful disaster, is hence of which we published a short time since, was politely handed us by a gentleman now in the city, as contained in a letter addressed to him by one of the survivors of the wreck.—The Pennsylvania had on board a Texian land company bound for Texas.—Press.

NEW ORLEANS, OCT. 14.

DEAR SIR: Well, here I am in New Orleans, rather safely, as you may, when you have started we landed for Texas. No doubt, as would like to be informed how I came here. Well, listen, or rather read. I left Austin on the 10th of September, in the schooner Pennsylvania, Captain Williams, the same, both trip, and twenty one passengers. We met with very fair weather till the 14th. About three o'clock in the afternoon it commenced blowing a tremendous gale from the southwest. We continued scudding the main and fore sails; the gale continuing to increase so we reefed, the captain thought it proper to lay to. Accordingly he did so about sunset, by taking down the mainsail, and close reefing the fore sail. About that time I was standing on deck with some others, the sea was mountains high, and suddenly a sea was struck her in the bows and swept her from stem to stern, thereby carrying us to the main. I immediately went down to change my clothes. After getting on a shirt, Wilson (the steward with myself) were to me, "Say down till the storm is over." I accordingly did so. I had lain about an hour or two when Bottrell, a passenger, came, "we're sprung a leak." I told him to hold his tongue and not be so foolish, as it was only water coming through the bottom, for you must know that the mate had put the hatch on and fastened us down.) He persisted in declaring that it was so, when another passenger, Thomas, whose name was also Wilson, went on deck to see to our horses' cane hatch and found out that the water was coming in at a place about six or eight inches long. There was now eight inches water in her hold. The pumps on deck were kept going all the time. We lay in this situation until half past 11 o'clock, when one she went, kerr-a-sh! The first shock 400 miles off Cape Hatteras. Our situation was now horrible in the extreme; the vessel having struck between the plank, jamming and tearing us in the most horrid manner. I forgot to say that Captain Pratt, and four hands, Medill, Miller, and lady, Mr. Gibson, Barry, Lyons, and Whitney, perished immediately. We lay in this dreadful situation until the next day, when the sea became more calm. We then discovered that Gibson, Wolfe, Kerr, Thompson, and Mrs. Barry, had escaped from the cabin, the bulk head having been knocked away. We got them to the centre of the vessel, where we had more room. Towards night the sea became more rough, when we were again shocked about between the tremendous and plank. To conceive our situation would be impossible; suffice it to say we continued in this situation all morning. With morning the sea became more calm, when we began to look for food. Judge of our surprise and horror when we discovered that every article of food had gone through the main hatch. (We were loaded with Jamaica rum, Virginia, Cuba, potatoes, and hogs.) Our situation was indeed desperate. No raft could be got on board, so we took to the water. In leaving our situation, one of the Davidson directed through the hatch to save himself, and was seen no more. There were now thirteen left. Gibson, two Negroes, Thompson, Wells, Kerr, a boy, (name unknown,) myself, three Dutchmen, Mrs. Barry, and Mrs. Burrill. From the 14th to the 18th the sea ran very calm. On the morning of the 18th, myself, in looking for something to quench our parching thirst, discovered or me the cabin a cluster of gin. We immediately began to work taking away the plank to get at it; we had removed but two, when in their eagerness to get it, it broke. Hope had indeed almost left us, when, in taking away the plank, we discovered the ship right at the cabin door to be. I immediately went down and picked up some pork, gin, parties, &c. from the cabin door. I now tried to get out, but found it almost impossible, on account of the motion of the vessel in the heavy. Kerr and Wilson then tried, but with no better success. On looking down, again I saw a pistol on the deck; I went down to get it, while down I saw a cabin of [illegible] ran, and to get through. I swam to the stern of the vessel caught hold of the rudder rope, the rudder being out) and got upon the boat.—I had no sooner got up, when I saw Wilson, I immediately got him on the keel with me. To be brief, we remained on the keel from the 18th to the 24th, when we were discovered by [illegible] (name unknown) by the captain of the ship Amelia, bound for New Orleans. He immediately sent a boat and took us off; they then cut three large holes in the bottom, and found that they were all dead, except one Dutchman, whom they took on board; he lived two days and then died. While on the ship we were shown every kindness by Captain Thompson and mate, Mr. Plummer, and passengers.

The Arkansas Gazette states that the steamboat Believeux struck a snag recently, near Frog Bayou, and sunk immediately. No liver lost

REPERTORY JOURNAL.

FRIDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 7, 1837.

PUBLICATION DAY.

For a considerable time past we have had in contemplation a change in our publication day, as Thursday has been found less suited to our purposes than Saturday. Henceforth, therefore, the Journal will be published on Saturday.

OUR CORRESPONDENTS.

Several communications remain over on file, for insertion. They will appear in our next—the pre-occupation of our columns excluding them from the present number.

THE RIVER.

The Illinois river is, at present, nineteen feet above low water mark, and falling slowly. The Merlin, which came last trip, ascended up Fox river several miles. Steamboats, as usual, are very busy, and trade brisk. The weather is fine and there is little prospect of the river closing for some weeks to come.

THE MAILS.

The mails are very irregular at present, owing, we presume, to high waters. An arrival this evening confirms the intelligence of the success of the Whigs at the recent election in New York. The Whigs are said to have a majority of seventy in the House of Representatives, and the Democrats a majority of twenty in the Senate.

STATUE OF WASHINGTON—LIBERAL GIFT.—

On the 30th ult. an elegant marble statue of Washington, presented by John Hagan, Esq. of New Orleans, to the Mechanics' and Working Company of that city, was elevated to its lofty seat at the back of the Merchants' Exchange Reading Room. Mr. Calder, the architect of the building, in a safe and most expeditious manner.

The Three American states that this statue of "the Father of his country" is the work of Canova. Whether it is a copy, or the original, we do not know, but it is a splendid piece of workmanship, and unchallenged, on which is proposed to be inscribed the most conspicuous events of his eventful and gloriously passed; his sword lies at his feet. On either side of the pedestal are wreaths of oak (Liberty) and in the front the name of Louisiana. The inscription is in Latin, and reads: "The gift of Mr. Hagan cost fourteen thousand dollars.

A NEW COACH.—There is now in the course of building, at a coachmaker's in the metropolis, a coach of a new description or style novel, elegant, and safe. It is the invention of a scientific gentleman of Liverpool, who has obtained a patent for the same. Before we give a description of the vehicle, it may be proper to state that, on the suggestion of the superintendent of the royal mails, a committee was appointed to report on the best mail built, in order that its manufactured construction might combine safety and generality of use and comfort. Accordingly a public trial of one built at Nottingham was made, in presence of several hundreds of the most respectable inhabitants of the town. Every an experienced and well-known whip was on the box, and had passengers by his side, spirited horses, and had, inside and out, the full complement of passengers. On descending the hill to New Radford it was several times attempted by the whip and coachman, and pressing to the body and the house. The tops of these superstructures were surmounted by springs, on which it is supposed, so that mounting inequalities in the road, in case of gravity only, the vehicle is freely adjusted, and the holiday to overturn it completely conquered.—London Morn. Chron.

NATCHEZ, SEPT. 30.

UNPARALLELED MURDER.—On the night of the 26th instant the most unprecedented murder in the record of crimes was committed in Simpson County, Mississippi. Stanly Brown, at the age of 108 years, and his wife, a very old lady, were both murdered in their dwelling, each in their own negroes. Mr. Brown was a prudent, saving old man, and the reputation he had acquired of having on hand a large sum of silver; and on the night in question, he, his wife, negroes, retired to bed, and from the appearance, with a sharp pointed axe and hatchet, broke the skulls of both the old persons, in a most fiendish and heartless manner; and, with the same brutal barbarity, killed the three negroes, and threw two of them on the fire, and left the negro woman wounded among the dead. On one of Mr. Brown's shirts, as his neighbors say, to the amount of $8,000, was taken out of his chest, and no paper money in the same chest was left.

One negro woman on the place, not murdered, says, at a late hour in the night she was wakened from her sleep by a noise, that she rose and beheld her master and mistress lying on the porch murdered; and soon saw one with a torch in his hand seeing a negro man into the house, he was sought, to show the money: the same man was then murdered and thrown on the fire.—The whole woman, afraid to stir, gave no alarm until the next morning the neighbors assembled to behold this awful sight. No evidence has yet been discovered against the perpetrator of this horrid and murderer. But the public eye is turning to a certain individual well known as a noted murderer. The head of justice will overtake him.

From the Cincinnati Whig.

HATCHING CHICKENS BY STEAM.—The New York Transcript mentions, as a new discovery, that a Mr. William Fokes, of that city, had commenced hatching chickens by steam, in an oven, after the Chinese or Turkish plan. There are boxs on extensive establishment of this character, for some time in this neighborhood of Cincinnati, so that Mr. Fokes is not the first introducer of that mode of furnishing poultry for market.

DREADFUL AFFAIR AT THE MANSION OF SOMONS.—Sometime in the month of June last, a Siberian named Bryan McDermott, who for aught we know to the contrary, is a loyal descendant of the Czar Nicholas, had the misfortune to lose his wife, who died and left him, leaving your Bryan no poor than he, was obliged to send the two male heirs of his house to the Alms-house, from whence they were sent to the farm on Long Island. About one week since, another Siberian of the same name, but different family, namely Mrs. Mary Ann McDermott, who for forgot what was due to her high lineage and noble birth, but she grew dangerously in love of gin and bitters, and was sent to the Alms-house. Previously to this misfortune Mary was a married woman, and like most of the Irish McDermotts, had provided an heir to her estate, and when the mother went to enjoy the Blackwell's Island, the young gentleman was sent to finish his education with the other young McDermotts at the County College of the Almshouse. As soon as Mrs. McDermott had re-established her health at her country residence, she was very much astonished, immediately commenced a suit against her husband for separate maintenance, and the latter paid $1500 to the Almshouse as the trust for his wife and heir. Possessed of so much property, Mrs. McDermott thought it beneath her dignity to have her son at the Almshouse, and therefore sent for him to come to her home, and received an order to have him given up. On receiving the order, Mrs. McDermott "blew on the wings of matrimony," and without stopping to take a drop of gin on her journey, arrived at the Alms-house, demanded the extraction of her little darling. There happened, however, to be some difficulty, as Mrs. McDermott there at the same time, and the "monks and nokens," which she had left in the cradle, succeeded in recognizing by for some four or five others, that they were the identical Mrs. McDermotts there at the same time, and the "monks and nokens," which she had left in the cradle, succeeded in recognizing by for some four or five others, that they were the identical Mrs. McDermotts there at the same time, and the "monks and t
